Transforming Corrections: Humanistic Approaches to Corrections and Offender Treatment, 2nd Edition

David Polizzi, Indiana State University
Michael Braswell, East Tennessee State University
Matthew Draper, Utah Valley University

Description

Citation Information

http://amzn.com/1611632866
The humanistic approach is a broad term that encompasses three main approaches (Kirschenbaum 1975): Humanistic content curricula - Teaching topics that are directly relevant to the students’ lives (e.g. drugs awareness). Humanistic process curricula - Focuses on the whole student and can include teaching assertiveness training, for example. Humanistic school and group structures - restructuring the whole timetable and school environment in order to facilitate humanistic teaching or just individual classes. The approach includes: On a school level - open classrooms, class meetings and find