

William Wilson Hunter

He is most known for The Imperial Gazetteer of India on which he started working in 1869, and which was eventually published in nine volumes in 1881 and later as a twenty-six volume set after his death.

Early life and education

William Wilson Hunter was born on 15 July 1840 in Glasgow, Scotland, to Andrew Galloway Hunter, a Glasgow manufacturer. He was the second son, among his father's three sons. He started his education in 1854 at the 'Quaker Seminary' at Queenswood, Hampshire, after a year he joined, the Glasgow Academy.

He was educated at Glasgow University (BA 1860), Paris and Bonn, acquiring a knowledge of Sanskrit, LL.D., before passing first in the final examination for the Indian Civil Service in 1862.

Career

He reached Bengal Presidency in November 1862 and was appointed assistant magistrate and collector of Birbhum, in the lower provinces of Bengal, where he began collecting local traditions and records, which formed the materials for his publication, entitled The Annals of Rural Bengal, which influenced among others the historical romance Durgeshnandini of Bankim Chandra Chatterjee.^[2]

He also compiled A Comparative Dictionary of the Non-Aryan Languages of India, a glossary of dialects based mainly upon the collections of Brian Houghton Hodgson, which according to the 1911 Encyclopaedia Britannica "testifies to the industry of the writer but contains much immature philological speculation".^[3]

In 1869 Lord Mayo, the then governor-general, asked Hunter to submit a scheme for a comprehensive statistical survey of India. The work involved the compilation of a number of local gazetteers, in various stages of progress, and their consolidation in a condensed form upon a single and uniform plan. There was unhappiness with the scope and completeness of the earlier surveys conducted by administrators such as Buchanan, and Hunter determined to model his efforts on the Ain-i-Akbari and Description de l'Égypte. Hunter said that "It was my hope to make a memorial of England's work in India, more lasting, because truer and more complete, than these monuments of Mughal Empire and of French ambition."^[4]

In response to Mayo's question on 30 May 1871 of whether the Indian Muslims are "bound by their religion to rebel against the Queen" Hunter completed his influential work The Indian Musalmans in mid-June 1871 and later published it as a book in mid-August of the same year.^{[5][6]}

In 1872 Hunter published his history of Orissa. The third International Sanitary Conference held at Constantinople in 1866 declared Hindu and Muslim pilgrimages to be 'the most powerful of all the causes which conduce to the development and propagation of Cholera epidemics'. Hunter echoing the view described the 'squalid pilgrim army of Jagannath' as^[7] with its rags and hair and skin freighted with vermin and impregnated with infection, may any year slay thousands of the most talented and beautiful of our age in Vienna, London, or Washington.

He embarked on a series of tours throughout the country,^[4] and he supervised the A Statistical Account of Bengal (20 volumes, 1875-1877)^[8] and a similar work for Assam (2 volumes, 1879).^[9]

Hunter wrote that

Under this system, the materials for the whole of British India have now been collected, in several Provinces the work of compilation has rapidly advanced, and everywhere it is well in hand. During the same period the first Census of India has been taken, and furnished a vast accession to our knowledge of the people. The materials now amassed form a Statistical Survey of a continent with a population exceeding that of all Europe, Russia excepted."^[10]

The statistical accounts, covering the 240 administrative districts, comprised 128 volumes and these were condensed into the nine volumes of The Imperial Gazetteer of India, which was published in 1881.^[4] The Gazetteer was revised in later series, the second edition comprising 14 volumes published between 1885 and 1887, while the third comprised 26

Born	15 July 1840 Glasgow Scotland, UK
Died	6 February 1900 (aged 59) Oaken Holt, England, UK
Nationality	British
Fields	History , Statistician
Institutions	Indian Civil Service University of Calcutta
Alma mater	University of Glasgow

volumes, including an atlas, and was published in 1908 under the editorship of Herbert Hope Risley, William Stevenson Meyer, Richard Burn and James Sutherland Cotton.^[11]

The Imperial Gazetteer of India, William Wilson Hunter's most known work, on which he started working in 1869.

According to the 1911 Britannica, Hunter "adopted a transliteration of vernacular place-names, by which means the correct pronunciation is ordinarily indicated; but hardly sufficient allowance was made for old spellings consecrated by history and long usage."^[3] Hunter's own article on India was published in 1880 as A Brief History of the Indian Peoples, and has been widely translated and utilized in Indian schools. A revised form was issued in 1895, under the title of The Indian Empire: its People, History and Products.

Hunter later said that

Nothing is more costly than ignorance. I believe that, in spite of its many defects, this work will provide a memorable episode in the long battle against ignorance; a breakwater against the tide of prejudice and false opinions flowing down upon us from the past, and the foundation for a truer and wider knowledge of India in time to come. Its aim has been not literary graces, nor scientific discovery, nor antiquarian research; but an earnest endeavour to render India better governed, because better understood.^[4]

In 1882 Hunter, as a member of the governor-general's council, presided over the Commission on Indian Education; in 1886 he was elected vice-chancellor of the University of Calcutta.

In 1887 he retired from the service, was created KCSI, and settled at Oaken Holt, near Oxford.

On 13 March 1889 Philip Lyttelton Gell the then Secretary to the Delegates of the Clarendon Press, wrote to Hunter about a project which has been for some time under the consideration of the Delegates, to publish a series giving the salient features of Indian History in the Biographies of successive Generals and Administrators.^[2]

Gell arranged the publication of the series by June 1889; with Hunter receiving £75 for each volume, and the author £25. Gell's experience of the earlier unsaleable Sacred Books of the East and financial constraints forced the Rulers of India to end at 28 volumes in spite of Hunter's disappointment about the same.^[2]

Hunter himself contributed the volumes on Dalhousie (1890)^[12] and Mayo (1891)^[13] to the series.^[2]

He had previously written an official Life of Lord Mayo, which was published on 19 November 1875 in two volumes with a second edition appearing in 1876.^[14] He also wrote a weekly article on Indian affairs for The Times.

But the great task to which he applied himself on his settlement in England was a history upon a large scale of the British Dominion in India, two volumes of which only had appeared when he died, carrying the reader barely down to 1700. He was much hindered by the confused state of his materials, a portion of which he arranged and published in 1894 as Bengal Manuscript Records, in three volumes.

Hunter dedicated his 1892 work Bombay 1885 to 1890: A Study in Indian Administration to Florence Nightingale.^[15]

His later works include the novel titled The Old Missionary (1895, described on the title-page as "revised from The Contemporary Review"),^[16] and The Thackerays in India (1897). John F. Riddick describes Hunter's The Old Missionary as one of the "three significant works" produced by Anglo-Indian writers on Indian missionaries along with The Hosts of the Lord (1900) by Flora Annie Steel and Idolatry (1909) by Alice Perrin.^[17]

In the winter of 1898–1899, in consequence of the fatigue incurred in a journey to the Caspian and back, on a visit to the sick-bed of one of his two sons, Hunter was stricken down by a severe attack of influenza, which affected his heart. He died at Oaken Holt on 6 February 1900.

S. C. Mittal believes that Hunter "represented the official mind of the bureaucratic Victorian historians in India", of whom James Talboys Wheeler and Alfred Comyn Lyall were other examples.^[18]

Bibliography

Works

- A Comparative Dictionary of the Languages of India and High Asia: With a Dissertation. Based on the Hodgson Lists, Official Records, and Mss. Trübner and Company. 1868.
- Annals of Rural Bengal. Smith, Elder & Co. 1868.
- The Indian Musalmans: Are They Bound in Conscience to Rebel Against the Queen? Trübner and Company. 1871.
- Orissa, Or, The Vicissitudes of an Indian Province Under Native and British Rule. Smith, Elder and Company. 1872.
- A Statistical Account of Bengal. London: Trübner & Co. 1875–1879. (20 volumes)
- A Statistical Account of Assam. 1879. (2 volumes)
- A Brief history of the Indian peoples. Oxford: Clarendon Press. 1880.
- The Imperial Gazetteer of India. 1881. (26 volumes)
- The Indian Empire: Its People, History, and Products London (Second ed.). Trübner & Co. 1886.
- Bombay, 1885-1890: A Study in Indian Administration. Frowde. 1892.
- The Marquess of Dalhousie. 1894.
- State Education for the People in America, Europe, India, and Australia: With Papers on the Education of Women,

Technical Instruction, and Payment by Results. C. W. Bardeen. 1895.

- The Thackerays in India and Some Calcutta Graves. London: Henry Frowde. 1897.
- Williams Jackson, A. V., ed. (1906). History of India: From the first European settlements to the founding of the English East India Company. History of India. 6. London: Grolier Society.
- Williams Jackson, A. V., ed. (1907). History of India: The European struggle for Indian supremacy in the seventeenth century. History of India. 7. London: Grolier Society.

Works about Hunter

- Francis Henry Bennett Skrine (1901). Life of Sir William Wilson Hunter, K.C.S.I. Longmans, Green.

See also

- Hunterian transliteration
- Census of India prior to independence

References

- ↑ "Obituary: Sir William Wilson Hunter, K. C. S. I., C. I. E.". The Geographical Journal. 15 (3): 289–290. March 1900. JSTOR 1774698.
- 1 2 3 4 Chatterjee, Rimi B. (2004). "'Every Line for India': The Oxford University Press and the Rise and Fall of the Rulers of India Series". In Chakravorty, Swapan; Gupta, Abhijit. Print Areas: Book History in India. Orient Blackswan. pp. 65–102. ISBN 978-81-7824-082-4.
- 1 2 Encyclopædia Britannica. 13. 1911. p. 945.
- 1 2 3 4 Marriott, John (2003). The other empire: metropolis, India and progress in the colonial imagination. Manchester University Press. p. 209. ISBN 978-0-7190-6018-2. Retrieved 7 December 2011.
- ↑ v. L. B. (1872). "De Mohammedanen in Hindostan. — Our Indian Musalmans: Are they bound in conscience to rebel against the Queen? by W. W. Hunter". Bijdragen tot de Taal-, Land- en Volkenkunde van Nederlandsch-Indië. 18 (2): 121–122. JSTOR 25736656.
- ↑ Ali, M. Mohar (1980). "Hunter's "Indian Musalmans": A Re-Examination of Its Background". The Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society of Great Britain and Ireland (1): 30–51. JSTOR 25211084.
- ↑ Thomas R. Metcalf (27 February 1997). Ideologies of the Raj. Cambridge University Press. p. 175. ISBN 978-0-521-58937-6.
- ↑ "A Statistical Account of Bengal by W. W. Hunter". The North American Review. 127 (264): 339–342. September–October 1878. JSTOR 25100678.
- ↑ "Hunter, Sir William Wilson". Oxford Dictionary of National Biography (online ed.). Oxford University Press. doi:10.1093/ref:odnb/14237. (Subscription or UK public library membership required.)
- ↑ Nicholas B. Dirks (2003). Castes of Mind: Colonialism and the Making of Modern India. Permanent Black. p. 199. ISBN 978-81-7824-072-5.
- ↑ Henry Scholberg (1970). The District Gazetteers of British India: A Bibliography. Zug, Switzerland: Inter Documentation Company.
- ↑ H. P. (1891). "The Marquess of Dalhousie by William Wilson Hunter". Revue Historique. 47 (2): 387–393. JSTOR 40938228.
- ↑ H. P. (1892). "The Earl of Mayo by William Wilson Hunter". Revue Historique. 48 (2): 387–400. JSTOR 40939452.
- ↑ Satish Chandra Mittal (1 January 1996). India Distorted: A Study of British Historians on India. M.D. Publications Pvt. Ltd. p. 199. ISBN 978-81-7533-018-4.
- ↑ Florence Nightingale (6 December 2007). Florence Nightingale on Social Change in India: Collected Works of Florence Nightingale. Wilfrid Laurier University Press. p. 841. ISBN 978-0-88920-495-9.
- ↑ "The Old Missionary". The Spectator. 5 October 1895. p. 19. Retrieved 2014-12-23.
- ↑ John F. Riddick (1 January 2006). The History of British India: A Chronology. Greenwood Publishing Group. p. 179. ISBN 978-0-313-32280-8.
- ↑ Mittal, Satish Chandra (1996). India Distorted: A Study of British Historians on India. 2. M.D. Publications. p. 170. ISBN 9788175330184.

External links

- Works by William Wilson Hunter at Project Gutenberg
- Works by or about William Wilson Hunter at Internet Archive

Vice chancellors of the University of Calcutta

James William Colville · William Ritchie · Claudius James Erskine · Henry Sumner Maine · W. S. Seton-Karr · Edward Clive Bayley · Arthur Hobhouse · William Markby · Alexander Arbuthnot · Arthur Wilson · H. J. Reynolds · C. P. Ilbert · William Wilson Hunter · William Comer Petheram · Gooroodass Banerjee · Jones Quain Pigot · Alfred Woodley Croft · E. J. Trevelyan · Francis William Maclean · Thomas Raleigh · Alexander Pedler · Asutosh Mookerjee · Deva Prosad Sarbadhicary · Lancelot Sanderson · Nilratan Sircar · Asutosh Mookerjee · Bhupendra Nath Bose · William Ewart Greaves · Jadunath Sarkar · W. S. Urquhart · Hassan Suhrawardy · Syama Prasad Mookerjee · Sir Azizul Huque · Bidhan Chandra Roy · Radhabinod Pal · Pramathanath Banerjee · Charu Chandra Biswas · Sambhunath Banerjee · Jnan Chandra Ghosh · Nirmal Kumar Sidhanta · Subodh Mitra · Surajit Chandra Lahiri · Bidhubhushan Malik · S. N. Sen · Sushil Kumar Mukherjee · Ramendra Kumar Podder · Santosh Bhattacharyya · Bhaskarananda Ray Chaudhuri · Rathindra Narayan Basu · Asis Kumar Banerjee · Suranjan Das · Sugata Marjit

Authority control

WorldCat Identities · VIAF: 95217118 · LCCN: n50029702 · ISNI: 0000 0001 1198 7582 · GND: 119234300 · SUDOC: 059746912 · BNF: cb13630527n (data) · NLA: 35943102

Sir William Wilson Hunter KCSI CIE (15 July 1840 – 6 February 1900) was a Scottish historian, statistician, a compiler and a member of the Indian Civil Service. He is most known for The Imperial Gazetteer of India on which he started working in 1869, and which was eventually published in nine volumes in 1881, then fourteen, and later as a twenty-six volume set after his death. The Indian Musalmans is a historical classic fiction novel written By William Wilson Hunter. The report he gave, when William Hunter was given the task of inquiring about the state of the Muslims. And the cause of the rebellion during the English rule. He wrote this book with the highest bias towards Muslims. Although the book is considered to be a witness to history, in fact, the author here has taken the extreme contempt of history. Book Details: Book Name: The Indian Musalmans. Author: William Wilson Hunter.