MIT Undergraduate Curriculum Map and OCW. Representing the entire MIT curriculum, MIT OpenCourseWare is unique among all collections of open educational resources. This interactive map represents the MIT undergraduate curriculum and which of those courses can be found on OCW, so you can visualize and explore what OCW's broad curriculum coverage really means. The map is generated and maintained by The Mapping Lab, a project of the Willcox Group at MIT. Its data was last updated in June 2017. Please explore the map and send us your feedback. The data in the map was last updated in June 2017. Changes to the undergraduate curriculum and OCW publications after that date will be reflected in the next data update.

The article is assigned to the study of the problem of the evaluation of pupils' achievements in the study of a foreign language at the initial stage. The problem of monitoring and evaluating the knowledge, skills and abilities of learners in learning a foreign language has always been and continues to be relevant. There are traditional and alternative ways of measuring achievements developed by both domestic and foreign Methodists. In addition, age, the atmosphere of the proposed project, the purpose of the monitoring, the group of science, skills and competencies to be estimated, etc., Application requirements to Undergraduate Programs, documents required, English proficiency requirement, admission to the English preparatory year program, admission directly to freshman Level. The requirements for transfer applications to the Eastern Mediterranean University are as follows. Transfer applications should be to the 2nd, 3rd, 4th or 5th semesters. All applicants for whom English is a second language are required to take EMU English Proficiency Exam, or present documents demonstrating their English proficiency level. Please visit http://fleps.emu.edu.tr for details. Turkish Citizens. The majority of newly admitted students who have just completed secondary school studies spend their first Academic Year at EMU in the English Preparatory Year Program.