Abysmal Laughter

STUART GRANT
Monash University

DOI: https://doi.org/10.22329/p.v3i2.571

Keywords: Phenomenology, Performance,

Abstract

Between March and June 2008, a group of fifteen Performance Studies and Communications students at Monash University in Melbourne, Australia undertook a course on comedy based on a series of six lectures by Agnes Heller in which she outlined ideas from her book, Immortal Comedy. Subsequently, the students attended a number of comedy shows and other events to perform practical group phenomenological research with an aim to activate the ground opened by Heller’s theories through description of actual comic phenomena. The outcomes— theoretic, experiential and, most surprisingly, pedagogical—were remarkable in their demonstration of the efficacy of group phenomenology as a method of intertwined practice, research and learning.

Author Biography

STUART GRANT, Monash University
 Lecturer in Performance Studies, Philosophy of Performance. Research into Time and Performance.

Published
2008-12-23

Issue
Vol 3 No 2 (2008)

Section
Articles

Copyright for an article is retained by the author, with first publication rights granted to PhaenEx. By virtue of its appearance in this Open Access Journal, it is understood that the article is freely available for use, with proper attribution, for educational and other non-commercial purposes. Reuse of the article for commercial purposes by anyone other than the author requires permission of the author. The author agrees to use proper citation of PhaenEx as the original source whenever s/he later republishes or reuses the article in other platforms. ISSN: