There are many reasons why a cookie could not be set correctly. Below are the most common reasons:

- You have cookies disabled in your browser. You need to reset your browser to accept cookies or to ask you if you want to accept cookies.
- Your browser asks you whether you want to accept cookies and you declined. To accept cookies from this site, use the Back button and accept the cookie.
- Your browser does not support cookies. Try a different browser if you suspect this.
- The date on your computer is in the past. If your computer's clock shows a date before 1 Jan 1970, the browser will automatically forget the cookie. To fix this, set the correct time and date on your computer.
- You have installed an application that monitors or blocks cookies from being set. You must disable the application while logging in or check with your system administrator.

Why Does this Site Require Cookies?

This site uses cookies to improve performance by remembering that you are logged in when you go from page to page. To provide access without cookies would require the site to create a new session for every page you visit, which slows the system down to an unacceptable level.

What Gets Stored in a Cookie?

This site stores nothing other than an automatically generated session ID in the cookie; no other information is captured.

In general, only the information that you provide, or the choices you make while visiting a web site, can be stored in a cookie. For example, the site cannot determine your email name unless you choose to type it. Allowing a website to create a cookie does not give that or any other site access to the rest of your computer, and only the site that created the cookie can read it.

It reminded me that the animals in the pictures were still wild animals, and shouldn't be trusted. But this photographer clearly felt the photo was worth the danger. 1. What was Isabelle Ramirez trying to do in the text? Simon: Yeah, I always wondered why the water made my eyes burn if it got on my face... and why it was a strange, orange colour, especially when the water was running low. Interviewer: So you decided to find out more. Simon: Yeah, I asked other people using the river and I visited a few websites and found out that the river was orange because of pollution from the old mines in the area. There was a lot of mining for coal done in this part of the country. I am standing in a queue at the supermarket. The woman in front of me is talking on her mobile while the shop assistant is filling her bags. I'll say something if she doesn't stop soon. No, I won't. My phone's ringing too. But more important than the way they dressed was the fact that they talked over the records. They shouted to the dancers in time with the rhythm of the music - the first form of 'rapping'. When rapping started in New York, new dances were invented. Why are young people staying with their parents longer? Why do some people think the UK is a nation of 'couch potatoes'? Task 4. Did any information about the UK surprise you? Task 5. Do you think you do the same things your parents did 25 years ago?

Being first: why the Americans needed it, and why Royal National Park didn't stand in their way
